PREFACE

A GLOSSARY OF PHILOSOPHICAL TERMS, as this small book is named, is meant to be a concise lexicon of Sanskrit terms with equivalent English expressions. The Glossary embraces all systems of Indian Philosophy, Sāṅkhya, Yoga, Nyāya, Vaiśeṣika, Mīmāṃsā, Vedānta, Bauddha, Jaina, and Pāncarātra, with their glossatory ramifications. To suit the various senses in which a single Sanskrit term is used in different contexts or treatises, varying English words are mentioned ; this will enable a choice of words to interpreters at their need. When a term is predominant or classical in any one system of Philosophy, that is denoted apart by a single abbreviating alphabet, such as, (n) for Nyāya, and (y) for Yoga. Nine abbreviations are printed at the commencement of the Glossary. In many cases where any technical term has been considered significant, pervasive or important, definitions (Lakṣaṇas) have been extracted from treatises in the footnotes. I am indebted to the several learned translators, Indian and Foreign, for some of these equivalents and they have also been used with suitable alterations and adaptations whenever necessary. It is hoped that these English equivalents may, as time passes, become recognised and standardised as Anglo-Indian philosophical terms, just as in the field of Physical Sciences and Politics words have been coined and expressions have been devised to render foreign terms into Indian languages. The purpose of these pages is to add a facility to the work of the translator—a translator's task is hardly enviable—and if that purpose is in any manner achieved, I shall deem it a temporal gratification ; and all apart, this is my humble homage to the great Sages who were the original Seers of these philosophical concepts and worshipful Idols of Indian spiritual celebrity, and my humble adoration to Śrī Veṅkaṭeśvara, in whose Oriental Institute I have learnt the little that gave the incentive to this idea.

My thanks are due to Sarasvatīhṛdayālankāra, Śāradāvilāsa, etc., M. Krishnamachariar, M.A., M.L., Ph.D., M.R.A.S., the Director of the Institute, for his guidance and to Mr. N. Aiyaswami Sastri for helping me in revising the manuscript and in passing it through the Press.

According to Śrīpati, Ṣaṭsthala is the connecting link between the an and Brahman. The Ātman attains Brahmatva by jñāna and jñāna is aided by draṣṭavya (closely examining the truth), śrotavya (by hearing the truth), upadeśa (by upadeśa), mantavya (by meditation), and nididhyāsitavya (by firm contemplation). If jñāna is obtained in this manner, the result is that Jīva becomes Śambhu.
